MANAGEMENTS' DISCUSSION OF FUND PERFORMANCE

Market Overview

International equity markets advanced during the six months ended September 30, 2026, rebounding strongly in the spring before producing more modest gains in the third quarter. Continued enthusiasm for artificial intelligence and related technology investment supported equity prices, even as geopolitical tensions, higher energy prices, and rising bond yields weighed on investor sentiment. Market results were uneven, with technology shares remaining an important source of strength.

In this continued "risk on" environment, the Tweedy, Browne International Value Fund (the "Fund") produced a return of 9.19% for the six months ended September 30, 2026, compared to 11.72% for its benchmark, the MSCI EAFE Index (in USD) over the same period.

What Impacted Performance During the Period?

On an absolute return basis, industrials and information technology were the top contributors to performance, supported by strong results in machinery, air freight and logistics, IT services, and technology hardware holdings. Consumer staples and financials also added meaningfully, led by beverages and banking. Consumer discretionary, communication services, and materials contributed more modestly. Health care was the largest sector detractor, principally due to weakness in biotechnology, while energy also detracted.

At the country level, Britain and South Korea were the largest contributors to performance. France, the Netherlands, Germany, Switzerland, Sweden, and Singapore also added meaningfully to returns. The United States was the most significant country-level detractor, principally reflecting the decline in Ionis Pharmaceuticals. China, Finland, Italy, and Hong Kong detracted more modestly.

Across market capitalization groups, holdings with market values above $10 billion drove the bulk of the Fund's return. Smaller and medium capitalization holdings also contributed positively.
